A FAN MADE CAMPAIGN FOR

ARKHAM HORROR
THE CARD GAME

AGES UNWOUND

CAMPAIGN GUIDE

Based on the works of
CLARK ASHTON SMITH

Fantasy Flight Games
ROSEVILLE, MN

2022

"I was well acquainted with Milwarp over a term of years. But my recollection of the man is becoming strangely blurred, like an image in a misted mirror. His dark, half-alien personality, his preoccupation with the occult, his immense knowledge of Eastern life and lore, are things I remember with such effort and vagueness as attends the recovery of a dream. Sometimes I almost doubt that he ever existed. It is as if the man, and all that pertains to him, were being erased from human record by some mysterious acceleration of the common process of obliteration."

– Clark Ashton Smith, "The Chain of Aforgomon"

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Preface 6
Changes for Solo Play 7
Additional Rules 8

Prologue 20
Scenario I - Night of Fire 22
Interlude I - An Unknown Benefactor 34
Scenario II - The Myriad Gentleman 40
Scenario III - A World Torn Down 58
Scenario IV - Unstuck 90
Scenario V - A Year to Plan 16
Scenario VI - A World Torn Down, Again 68
Scenario VII - Time Runs Out 98

Design Notes 108
Credits 110
Epilogue 114

PREFACE

Ages Unwound is a fan-made campaign for Arkham Horror: The Card Game for 1-4 players.

Expansion Icon

The cards in the Ages Unwound campaign can be identified by this symbol before each card's collector number.

Campaign Setup

To set up the Ages Unwound campaign, perform the following steps in order.

1. Choose investigator(s).
2. Each player assembles their investigator deck.
3. Choose difficulty level.
4. Assemble the campaign chaos bag.

Chaos Bag

»(I want to experience the story):
+1, +1, 0, 0, 0, -1, -1, -1, -2, -2, 💀, 💀, 💀, 👤, 👹, 🐙, ⭐.

»Standard (I want a challenge):
+1, 0, 0, -1, -1, -1, -2, -2, -3, -4, 💀, 💀, 💀, 👤, 👹, 🐙, ⭐.

»Hard (I want a true nightmare):
0, 0, 0, -1, -1, -2, -2, -3, -3, -4, -5, 💀, 💀, 💀, 👤, 👹, 🐙, ⭐.

»Expert (I want Arkham Horror):
0, -1, -1, -2, -2, -3, -3, -4, -4, -5, -6, -8, 💀, 💀, 💀, 👤, 👹, 🐙, ⭐.

CHANGES FOR SOLO PLAY

A few effects in Ages Unwound will instruct you to interact with another investigator's deck. To simulate this in true solo play, construct a dummy deck out of the following cards:

»Guardian: .45 Automatic, Beat Cop, Emergency Aid, On the Hunt, Vicious Blow

»Seeker: Hawk-Eye Folding Camera, Old Book of Lore, Barricade, Connect the Dots, Deduction

»Rogue: Burglary, Lockpicks, Narrow Escape, Sneak Attack, Quick Thinking

»Mystic: Rite of Seeking, Shrivelling, Dark Prophesy, Drawn to the Flame, Fearless

»Survivor: Gravedigger's Shovel, Rabbit's Foot, Hiding Spot, Scrounge for Supplies, Rise to the Occasion

Remove any cards of your class from this deck, as well as any cards you have at least one copy of in your deck. If you do not own any or the cards on this list, make appropriate replacements from your collection. (Each class has 2 assets, 2 events and 1 skill, representing the core of that class. Avoid must-have or always useful cards such as Lone Wolf.)

Whenever you are instructed to interact with another investigator's deck, instead interact with the dummy deck. When a card from the dummy deck would leave play, instead shuffle it back into the dummy deck.

Continue to Additional Rules on page 8.

Continue to the Prologue on page 20.

ADDITIONAL RULES

Alert

Each time an investigator fails a skill test while attempting to evade an enemy with the alert keyword, after applying all results for that skill test, that enemy performs an attack against the evading investigator. An enemy does not exhaust after performing an alert attack. This attack occurs whether the enemy is engaged with the evading investigator or not.

Story Cards

Story cards serve as an avenue for additional narrative and typically appear as the reverse side of another scenario card. When you are instructed to resolve a story card, simply read its story text and resolve its game text.

Swarming X

An enemy with the swarming X keyword is actually a pack of enemies operating in unison. After you put an enemy with the swarming X keyword into play, place the top X cards of your deck facedown underneath the enemy as swarm cards, without looking at them. The enemy they are underneath is called the "host enemy." Some scenario card effects may also instruct a player to add swarm cards to an enemy. This is done using the same process.

»If it is ever unclear which investigator should add swarm cards, the lead investigator does so.

»Each swarm card underneath the host enemy acts as a separate instance of that enemy for most purposes. Each swarm card has the same values and text as its host card. (For example, if an investigator is engaged with a host enemy with 2 swarm cards underneath it, that investigator is engaged with 3 enemies in total.)

»Each swarm card attacks separately when enemies attack during the enemy phase. Once the host enemy and all of its swarm cards have attacked during this step, exhaust all of them.

»Each swarm card can be attacked or dealt damage separately, but the host enemy cannot be defeated while it still has swarm cards underneath it. When a swarm card is defeated, any excess damage may be dealt to another swarm card underneath the same host enemy or to the host enemy itself. (For example, Tony Morgan uses a Chicago Typewriter to attack The Myriad Gentleman with 2 swarm cards. The attack deals 3 damage. The first 2 points of damage defeat I of the 2 swarm cards, so the excess point of damage may be dealt to another swarm card, damaging but not defeating it.)

»Anytime a swarm card leaves play, place it on the bottom of its owner's deck. If you are unsure of the owner of the swarm card, you may look at it to determine its owner. The host enemy and all of its swarm cards move, engage, and exhaust as a single entity. (For example, if a host enemy or any of its swarm cards are evaded, all of them exhaust and become disengaged.)

Continue to the Prologue on page 20.

…from page 95 (Resolution 7).

Even thus they have left me, and have gone away. Long since the burden of the massy links, cutting deeper and deeper into my flesh, has become an agony. I am dizzy from gazing downward into the abyss — and yet I cannot fall. Beneath, immeasurably beneath, at recurrent intervals, I hear a hollow and solemn sound. Perhaps it is the sigh of sunken waters ... of cavern-straying winds ... or the respiration of One that abides in the darkness, meting with his breath the slow minutes, the hours, the days, the ages.... My terror has become heavier than the chain, my vertigo is born of a two-fold gulf....

Eons have passed by and all the worlds have ebbed into nothingness, like wreckage borne on a chasm-falling stream, taking with them the lost face of Belthoris. I am poised above the gaping maw of the Shadow.... Somehow, in another world, an exile phantom has written these words... a phantom who must fade utterly from time and place, even as I, the doomed priest Calaspa. I cannot remember the name of the phantom.

Beneath me, in the black depths, there is an awful brightening...

»Huh? That's strange. It's almost as if you read the story out of order? Perhaps you should turn back and pay attention to where you're supposed to go.

»Anyway....

... from page 95 (Investigator Defeat).

You come to in a moonlit jail cell. Your head pounds like nothing you've ever felt before, and as you try and get someone's attention you feel the flow of time slip around you, and suddenly the sun is high in the sky. You manage to attract the attention of a very confused police officer, who doesn't remember you ever being brought in.

He asks you a few questions - which you do your best to answer, though your memories are of little help to you - before releasing you onto the streets of Arkham, nonplussed but without reason to hold you.

Emerging from the station, you're forced to duck into an alleyway as you spot an officer approaching, supporting a barely-conscious you. "Picked this one up right off the street," you hear him comment to the desk sergeant. "Bold as brass, just lying there in a drunken stupor." He's not got it quite right, but you can hardly stop to correct him.

With your feet firmly on the ground, you take a moment to stop and breathe in the air. Arkham's distinct ashy, slightly mildewed scent fills you with a sense of peace.

You're home.

Your reverie doesn't last long. The Myriad's ritual was disrupted by your efforts, but could still contiue. It's daytime now, so presumably it's the next day... or the previous one. You spot a newsagent with a stack of papers on sale, and your heart sinks as you read the date:

VOL LXI., NO. 5 Price 5¢

The Arkham Advertiser

Arkham, Massachusetts, Tuesday, Auguest 26th, 1924.

"THE COLONY"

A NEW ART ENCLAVE OR SOMETHING MORE SINISTER

By Minnie Klein

Residents of French Hill are still in a tizzy after the sudden rennovation of the long ab-

whether the socialites are considering Fairmont's new project a success or not they are at least clammoring

Tuesday, August 26th, 1924

You're early. You've arrived a whole year before you left.

»Each investigator who was defeated gains the Time Runs Backwards weakness, and must add it to their deck.

»Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.

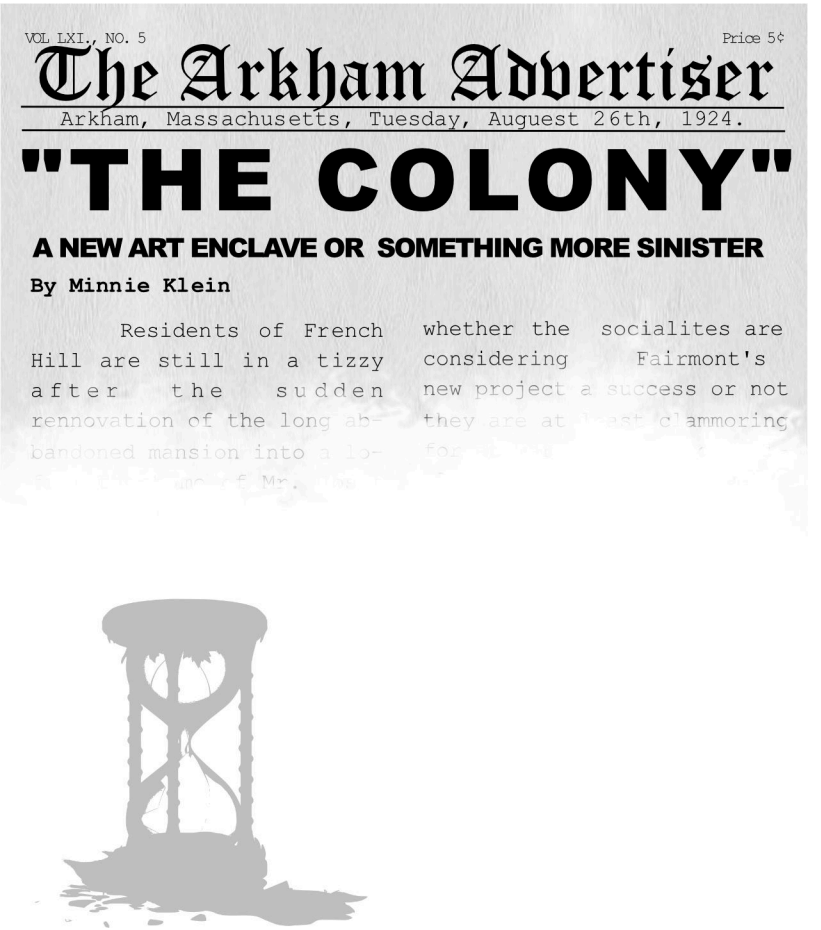
Continue to Scenario V - A Year to Plan on page 16.

…from page 95 (Resolution 1).

With your feet firmly on the ground, you take a moment to stop and breathe in the air. Arkham's distinct ashy, slightly mildewed scent fills you with a sense of peace.

You're home.

Your reverie doesn't last long. The Myriad's ritual was disrupted by your efforts, but could still continue. It's daytime now, so presumably it's the next day... or the previous one. You spot a newsagent with a stack of papers on sale, and your heart sinks as you read the date:



VOL LXI., NO. 5 Price 5¢

The Arkham Advertiser

Arkham, Massachusetts, Tuesday, Auguest 26th, 1924.

"THE COLONY"

A NEW ART ENCLAVE OR SOMETHING MORE SINISTER

By Minnie Klein

Residents of French Hill are still in a tizzy after the sudden rennovation of the long abandoned mansion into a lo- [illegible] whether the socialites are considering Fairmont's new project a success or not they are at least clammoring [illegible]

Tuesday, August 26th, 1924

You're early. You've arrived a whole year before you left.

»Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.

Continue to Scenario V - A Year to Plan on page 16.

SCENARIO V
A YEAR TO PLAN

It takes a little time to get used to being in the past. There's a second you here - you've seen them, though you made sure they didn't see you. That means you don't have a home, or a family, unless you want to meddle with your own past.

Once you get yourself set up, though, you're able to do some research. A few days at the Miskatonic University library dig up some interesting leads you intend to follow up on. The Myriad are operating in this time, it seems - so why not interfere with their plans?

Setup

» Gather all cards from the following encounter sets: A Year to Plan, Missions, Myriad, Shifting Reality, Unraveling Years, Dark Cult, and The Midnight Masks. These sets are indicated by the following icons:

When gathering The Midnight Masks encounter set, only gather the 5 treachery cards (2x False Lead and 3x Hunting Shadow). Do not gather the location, act, agenda, or scenario reference cards from that set.

» Put each City and Wilderness location into play.

- Each investigator begins play in Arkham, Massachusetts.

» Put the Helping Yourself treachery into play next to the act deck with X resources on it. X is the number of marks under Strange Assistance in your Campaign Log.

»Shuffle the following treachery cards together to form the task deck: Enemy of my Enemy, A Treasure Unearthed, The Devil You Know, Higher Powers, Entreating the Gods and Up To Something. Place this deck near the scenario reference card.

»Set the remainder of the Missions encounter set aside, out of play, along with each copy of Curse of a Thousand Winters. The Missions encounter set can be identified by this icon:

»Shuffle the remainder of the encounter cards to build the encounter deck.

»You are now ready to begin.

Tasks

Some treacheries in this scenario have the Task trait. These cards have objectives on, which provide goals to complete throughout the scenario. When you meet the objective printed on a Task, or when another card tells you to complete it, remove it from the game, making sure to keep track of which Tasks you've completed.

When the game is complete:

» If no resolution was reached (each investigator was defeated),

Go to page 52.

»If Resolution 1 was reached,

Go to page 52.

PROLOGUE

A WARNING

The night's chill has reached your bones, soaking through your layers of warm clothing and settling on your soul. Your eyes, by now accustomed to the dim moonlight, spot no movement on the abandoned street. It's long past midnight. It must be past 1 AM by now.

The call had been rather questionable - a muffled, distorted voice, entreating you to meet it at midnight, that the fate of the world depended on it. Outlandish, yes, but the caller knew things, things that almost no-one knows about you. It wasn't quite blackmail, but rather a promise of trustworthiness. A promise that everything would be explained soon.

You feel a little foolish as you trudge home. Like some cruel trick has been played upon you. Probably you shouldn't have gone, but something made you want to believe the voice on the other end of the phone. Foolish.

Bright, flickering light almost blinds you. You blink rapidly, and as your eyes adjust the blinding hues resolve into an image of fire and fury. Your home is ablaze, an inferno so fierce and hot that it couldn't not be deliberate. Somebody trying to kill you? But why?

And if this is an attempt on your life, what does that make the peculiar call you received earlier this evening?

»Mark 1 Strange Assistance in your Campaign Log. Someone just saved your life.

Continue to Scenario I - Night of Fire on page 22.

SCENARIO I

NIGHT OF FIRE

Your mournful reverie is broken by movement. The pyre that was once your home illuminates three figures, strolling towards you. They seem to be holding...

A staccato burst of noise shatters the night's quiet. Gunfire.

Definitely someone trying to kill you, then.

Proceed to Setup on page 24.

Setup

» Gather all cards from the following encounter sets: Night of Fire, Agents of Aforgomon, Nyctophobia, Thugs, Unravelling Ages and Striking Fear. These sets are indicated by the following icons:

» Put the Rivertown location into play. (It is on the revealed side of one of the Arkham Streets locations.) Each investigator begins play at Rivertown.

» Shuffle the remaining locations into a separate deck, Arkham Streets side faceup. (See "Arkham Streets", on the next page.)

» Set Eternity's Sentinel, each copy of Time Spirit and the Agents of Aforgomon encounter set aside, out of play. The Agents of Aforgomon encounter set can be identified by the following icon:

Arkham Streets

Several scenario effects will ask you to move to a new Arkham Streets location. To do this, put the top card of the Arkham Streets deck into play facedown, then move to it. If there are no locations remaining in the Arkham Streets deck, cancel the effect of the move.

Note that once an Arkham Streets location is in play, its connections behave normally. It may not be possible to move back to your previous location, or for another investigator at your previous location to follow you.

»Shuffle the remainder of the encounter cards to build the encounter deck.

»You are now ready to begin.

When the game is complete:

» If no resolution was reached (each investigator was defeated),
Go to page 26.

»If Resolution 1 was reached,
Go to page 26.

»If Resolution 2 was reached,
Go to page 28.

»If Resolution 3 was reached,
Go to page 30.

»If Resolution 4 was reached,
Go to page 32.

…from page 25 (No Resolution or Resolution 1).

Tired, beaten, broken, you collapse to the ground. In the distance, the funeral pyre of your home still burns, lighting up the night. With the figures pursuing you endlessly, and the nightmarish creatures accompanying them, you can only assume that you 'll shortly be going down with your ship.

That said, you've been lying here a while now, and no-one's come to put one last bullet into you. With Herculean effort, you pull yourself to your feet, only to find the streets around you... empty. There are still rattles of gunfire in the distance - your pursuers finding a new target, perhaps?

» In your Campaign Log, record that your hunters found a new quarry.

» Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.

Continue to Interlude I - An Unknown Benefactor on page 34.

…from page 25 (Resolution 2).

Slowly, the streets are filling. Young people in sports attire pursue early-morning exercise, and men in suits hurry towards some office or other. Of the nightmare creature that pursued you, no sign. For now, at least, you've escaped its clutches.

» In your Campaign Log, record that the investigators escaped the night of fire.

» Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display. Each investigator earns 2 bonus experience from their desperate flight.

Continue to Interlude I - An Unknown Benefactor on page 34.

…from page 25 (Resolution 3).

With the fall of the creature leading your pursuit, the rest of your hunters vanish into the night. The body you are left with quickly dissolves, leaving a brown sludge that someone whose night had been less traumatic might mistake for soil. Someone, or something, must have sent this monster after you. But who, and why?

»In your Campaign Log, record that the investigators slew their strange observer.

»Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.

Continue to Interlude I - An Unknown Benefactor on page 34.

…from page 25 (Resolution 4).

You come to a halt, your lungs and limbs screaming in protest. You take several deep breaths, ragged gasps tearing through the silence of the night.

Silence... for the first time in hours, no distant shout or rattle of gunfire follows you. You made it.

»In your Campaign Log, record that the investigators escaped the night of fire.

»Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display. Each investigator earns 2 bonus experience from their desperate flight.

Continue to Interlude I - An Unknown Benefactor on on page 34.

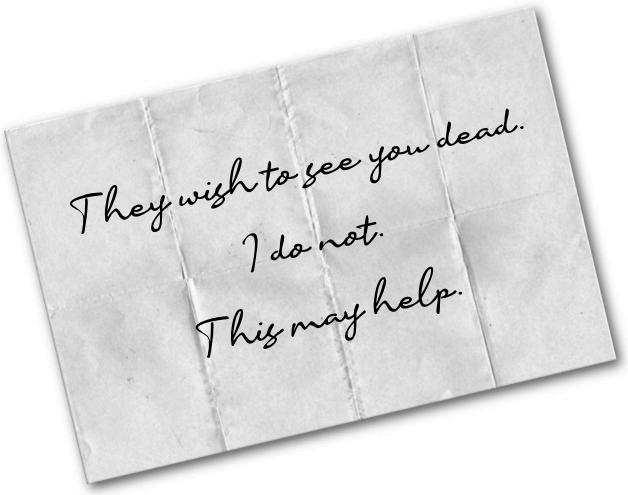
INTERLUDE

AN UNKNOWN BENEFACTOR

Blessedly, the morning has come. Tiredness weighs you down like lead, and you want nothing more than to sink into your bed, but your bed perished in flames and sleep is a distant dream. Not to mention that with armed thugs still potentially after your head, you're not sure you'd sleep a wink.

You decide to settle for a hot breakfast and a pot of strong coffee at Velma's. While you wait for your food, a confused-looking waitress approaches your table, depositing on it a brown paper package with an envelope taped to the top. "This is for you," she adds unnecessarily.

The letter in the envelope is short and to the point:



God knows, you could use an ally, and certainly somebody out there seems to be aiding you from afar. But you hesitate - it could be a trap, and if someone does want to help you, why not show their face?

The investigators must decide (choose one):

»I don't know what this is, and I don't trust it.

Go to page 36.

»We're out of our depth, here. We need all the help we can get.

Go to page page 38.

…from page 35 (Going It Alone).

You shovel toast and eggs into your mouth, studiously ignoring the package before you. On your way out, you toss it into the trash.

»In your Campaign Log, record that the investigators declined an offer of help.

»Remove each token from the chaos bag. Add 1 token to the chaos bag.

Continue to Scenario II - The Myriad Gentleman on page 40.

…from page 35 (Leap of Faith).

If someone wants to help prevent your untimely death, you have no objections. You carefully unwrap the package before you...

»In your Campaign Log, mark 1 Strange Assistance and record that the investigators accepted an offer of help.

»Remove each token from the chaos bag. Add 1 token to the chaos bag.

Continue to Scenario II - The Myriad Gentleman on page 42.

SCENARIO II
THE MYRIAD GENTLEMAN

The package contains a wealth of information - newspaper clippings, mostly, accompanied by sheets of typed notes. The information all concerns one Joseph Baxter, a self-made millionaire with a manor house on the outskirts of Arkham. His relevance to you is unclear, until you find a series of letters between Joseph and the Sheldon gang, negotiating pay for a variety of shady work, including the 'cleaning up' of, well, you. It's not clear exactly why he wanted you dead - he refers to you as 'a thorn in his side', but you'd not even heard of the man before today. Curious. And terrifying. Mostly the latter, come to think of it.

The gate to Joseph Baxter's mansion is closed and barred. but you've been through too much to let that deter you. You scale a low wall, dropping over it onto a fine manicured lawn. It's time to meet your would-be executioner.

Proceed to Setup on page 44.

SCENARIO II
THE MYRIAD GENTLEMAN

With a full stomach and a caffeine buzz, you set out to determine just why you were targeted. It's slow work, tapping any resources you can find, but it pays dividends: buried in today's Arkham Advertiser is a report of three men arrested in your neighbourhood in the early hours of the morning, suspected to be members of the Sheldon gang. A contact of yours manages to dig up another useful tidbit: the Sheldon gang have been doing a considerable amount of work for a new benefactor, one Joseph Baxter. It's not much to show for a morning's work, but it's a start.

The gate to Joseph Baxter's mansion is closed and barred. but you've been through too much to let that deter you. You scale a low wall, dropping over it onto a fine manicured lawn. It's time to meet your would-be executioner.

»When the game begins, place 1 doom on the current agenda.

Proceed to Setup on page 44.

Setup

»Gather all cards from the following encounter sets: The Myriad Gentleman, Shifting Reality, Unraveling Years, Agents of Yog Sothoth, and Locked Doors. These sets are indicated by the following icons:

»Put the Lawn, Hedge Maze, Ornate Fountain and Stables locations into play.

- Each investigator begins play at the Lawn.

»Set each remaining location aside, out of play, along with each copy of The Myriad Gentleman, Ex Uno Plures, They Just Keep Coming, Not Welcome Here, Aforgomon's Blade and Gaze of Aforgomon.

»Shuffle the remainder of the encounter cards to build the encounter deck.

»You are now ready to begin.

Copies of Enemies

During this scenario, investigators may be instructed to spawn copies of a displayed enemy. To do this, that investigator places the top card of their deck into play in their threat area, treating it as a copy of the specified enemy until it leaves play (if it is ever unclear who should do this, the lead investigator does so). When that enemy leaves play, the card's owner places it on the bottom of their deck.

When the game is complete:

» If no resolution was reached (each investigator was defeated),

Go to page 48.

»If Resolution 1 was reached,

Go to page 46.

»If Resolution 2 was reached,

Go to page 48.

…from page 45 (Resolution 1).

Joseph Baxter, the man whose house you've invaded, is part of a cult dedicated to an entity known as Aforgomon. Quite a large part of it, judging by the quantity of him you've encountered today. They're still coming for you though, endless waves of an impossible man, and you have no choice but to make your escape.

You've found very little of why he wants you dead - a scrawled note linking you to an event in Cairo, and a letter from the Sheldon gang promising you'll soon be dealt with. You've never even been to Cairo. Perhaps he's mad. Then again, considering what you've seen today, perhaps you are.

As the sun dips below the horizon, you consider your options. You could go to the police, but there's no chance they'd believe you. You could walk away, just disappear into the night... but you've seen what this cult can do, and you can't stand back and let them carry out their plan. And besides, insane or not, they still want you dead. Taking the fight to them seems more appealing than simply being hunted down.

You have a location, and no time to lose. Better get to it.

»In your Campaign Log, record that the investigators learnt of the Myriad's ritual.

»If the Myriad Gentleman (Master of the House) is in the victory display, any one investigator may choose to add Aforgomon's Blade to their deck. If an investigator chooses to include Aforgomon's Blade in their deck, they must also add the Gaze of Aforgomon weakness to their deck. These cards do not count towards that investigator's deck size.

»Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.

Continue to the Scenario III - A World Torn Down on page 60.

…from page 45 (Resolution 2 or No Resolution).

You barely remember your flight from Joseph Baxter's manor house. The wounds you nurse are severe, but you made it out alive, which is something.

You don't like what's happening here, not at all. Between the things that pursued you last night, and the unnatural proliferation of the man you faced today... It's enough to make you question your own sanity. Certainly more than you can take to the police, lest you end up in the local asylum. Which means, you conclude with a sinking feeling, that the only force in a position to stand against them is you.

»In your Campaign Log, record that the investigators fled the Gentleman's manor.

»If the Myriad Gentleman (Master of the House) is in the victory display, any one investigator may choose to add Aforgomon's Blade to their deck. If an investigator chooses to include Aforgomon's Blade in their deck, they must also add the Gaze of Aforgomon weakness to their deck. These cards do not count towards that investigator's deck size.

»Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.

Continue to the Scenario III - A World Torn Down on page 58.

...from page 49 (Lost).

You wander on on something that you clearly weren't supposed to see. "YOU'RE EARLY. YOU'RE NOT SUPPOSED TO BE HERE YET." The strange figure looks blankly at your until you turn around and go back to where you came from.

»That was unexpected.

The investigators must turn back the page and pay attention:
Return to the previous page you were on. NOW.

…from page 19 (Resolution 1 or No Resolution).

It's been a long year. It feels like you've been fighting forever, never stopping, never able to relax. One more night, you tell yourself, as you ready to head out. After tonight, whatever happens, your fight will be over.

» In your Campaign Log, record The ritual is nigh.

»Remove all , , and tokens from the chaos bag. Then, add 1 and 1 tokens to the chaos bag.

»For each investigator that did not resign, record in your Campaign Log that [investigator name] returned to Arkham late.

»For each of the following Tasks that are not completed. Go to the referenced page and discover the consequences.

- If Helping Yourself is not completed,

  Go to page 54.

- If Keeper of Knowledge is not completed and Ancient Sphinx is in play,

  Go to page 55 and flip the book over.

- If Strange Portal is not completed,

  Go to page 56.

- If The Tunguska Event not completed,

  Go to page 57 and flip the book over.

»For each copy of A Multitude of Plots in the victory display, record one of the following statements of your choice in your Campaign Log, as you fail to stop the Myriad from enacting one of their plans:

- The Myriad raised a powerful warding.
- The Myriad recruited a cruel sorcerer.
- The Myriad weaved a dread curse.

»For each of the following completed Tasks, any one investigator may choose to add the corresponding player card to their deck. Each of these cards does not count towards their owner's deck size.

- If Enemy of my Enemy is completed, one player may add Monastic Training to their deck.
- If A Treasure Unearthed is completed,
  one player may add Chronal Atlas to their deck.
- If The Devil You Know is completed,
  one player may add Ionian Pendant to their deck.
- If Higher Powers is completed,
  one player may add Agency Strike Team to their deck.
- If Entreating the Gods is completed,
  one player may add Wings of Damakairon to their deck.
- If Up to Something is completed,
  one player may add Forestall Fate to their deck.

»For each resource on the current act, add 1 token to the chaos bag.

»If the Myriad weaved a dread curse, each investigator must add 1 copy of Curse of a Thousand Winters to their deck. This card does not count towards deck size.

»Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.

Continue to Scenario VI - A World Torn Down, Again on page 68.

54

…from page 52 (Unaided).

As you prepare for your assault on the Myriad's ceremony, you feel time twist and distort around you. For one panicked moment, you think the ritual has started early. Then, you remember: your past self had help from a mysterious benefactor. Help you have failed to provide.

»Record in your Campaign Log that the investigators violated causality.

»Add 2 tokens to the chaos bag.

Return to page 52 and see what consequences remain.

...from page 52 (Puzzled).

The sphinx has since disappeared from Egypt. You don't imagine it would deign to fly to Arkham just to assist the cult of Aforgomon, but there's no telling what dark knowledge they may have extracted from it.

»Record in your Campaign Log that the Myriad solved the riddle of the sphinx.

»Add 2 tokens to the chaos bag.

Return to page 52 and flip the book back over to see what consequences remain.

…from page 52 (Anomalies).

Paris is quiet for the most part, but if you dig deep enough you find report after report of unexplained disappearances. Possessions, people, even whole buildings on occasion.

»Record in your Campaign Log that the Myriad harnessed the power of another realm.

Return to page 52 and see what consequences remain.

…from page 52 (Refracted).

You still don't know what exactly happened in Tunguska, but some of the Myriad Gentlemen you've encountered recently have been... different. Changed.

»Record in your Campaign Log that the Myriad took control of a colour out of space.

Return to page 52 and flip the book back over to see what consequences remain.

SCENARIO III
A WORLD TORN DOWN

Lacking other leads to pursue,you stay awhile to observe the Myriad Gentleman's home. You spend a long time waiting, watching the property's exits for any sign of movement. Sure enough, as the sun sets, a convoy of vehicles sets out from the manor. You follow as best you can, careful not to be spotted.

Before too long, the Myriad Gentleman reaches their destination. A school, by the look of it. You go to follow them, but before you're able to make it inside, the school is suffused with a dim green glow, rebuffing you, as a muffled chanting flows from the building...

Proceed to Setup on page 64.

SCENARIO III

A WORLD TORN DOWN

Mount Hollyoke Elementary was condemned by Arkham's town council several years ago, but for unknown reasons was never demolished. This seems to suit the Myriad just fine - they've repurposed it to their own ends. A ritual takes place here tonight one that could spell the end of everything and everywhen.

96

Proceed to Setup on page 64.

SCENARIO III
A WORLD TORN DOWN

Mount Hollyoke Elementary was condemned by Arkham's town council several years ago, but for unknown reasons was never demolished. This seems to suit the Myriad just fine - they've repurposed it to their own ends. A ritual takes place here tonight one that could spell the end of everything and everywhen.

96

»In your Campaign Log record that the timeline was weakened.

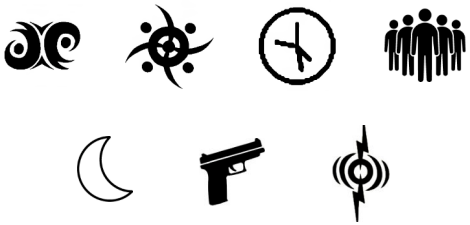
»Add two tokens to the chaos bag.

Proceed to Setup on page 64.

Setup

» Gather all cards from the following encounter sets: A World Torn Down, Night of the Ritual, Agents of Aforgomon, Myriad, Nyctophobia, Thugs, Time Spirits, and Unleashed Chaos. These sets are indicated by the following icons:



» Put Front Gates, Side Building, Children's Playground, Sports Field, Front Hallway and Rear Corridors into play.

- Each investigator begins play at the Front Gates.

» Set each other location aside, out of play, along with Hound of Unmaking, Unstable Warding, each copy of Unleashed Chaos, each copy of Stirring Titan, each copy of Time Spirit, Unstable Energies and The Myriad Gentleman (The High Priest).

Recording the Time

At various points during this scenario, you will be asked to record the time next to entries in your Campaign Log. To do this, simply record, in brackets, the current agenda number and the number of doom on the current agenda. For example: If there is 4 doom on agenda 1a, you would record the time as (1,4).

Treading Carefully

With the cult in the middle of their ritual you will have to tread carefully through this scenario. Pay close attention to what page you are told to turn to in this campaign guide, as turning to the wrong page might alert the cult and accelerate their plans.

Continue to page 72.

…from page 65 (Reckless).

You stumble forward only to realize that you made a mistake. "YOU WEREN'T TREADING VERY CAREFULLY, WERE YOU?" The strange figure motions for you to turn back around and return the way you came.

»Take 1 horror as you reckless stumble into this conundrum.

The investigators must turn back the page and pay attention:
Return to page 65.

SCENARIO VI

A WORLD TORN DOWN, AGAIN

Check the Campaign Log:

»If your hunters found a new quarry,

Go to page 70.

»Otherwise, If the Myriad harnessed the power of another realm,

Go to page 76.

»If neither of the above statements are true,

Go to page 78.

…from page 69 (Bruised).

There was, in the end, a simple way to lure the Sheldon gang and their supernatural compatriots away from your past self. Their target was you, after all.

That said, your encounters with them mean you reach the ritual site rather the worse for wear.

»Each investigator takes 1 direct damage and 1 direct horror.

Check the Campaign Log:

»If the Myriad harnessed the power of another realm,

Go to page 76.

»Otherwise,

Go to page 78.

Gaining and Losing Actions

As time becomes increasingly unstable, the number of actions you may take on a turn may also change.

»Several effects refer to standard actions. A standard action is any action that does not have a limitation on its use, regardless of its source. For example, Finn Edwards has a copy of Leo De Luca in play. He has four standard actions on his turns - the default three and an additional action from Leo - as well as an additional, non-standard action from his investigator ability that can only be used to evade.

»Each investigator is considered to gain their actions for the next round in step 4.2 of the upkeep phase. This means that effects after an investigator's turn cannot make them lose actions for the next round, unless they happen after the the upkeep phase. For example, Finn Edwards is attacked by a Chronophage in the enemy phase. This would cause him to lose an action, but as his turn has ended he has no actions remaining. During the upkeep phase of the same round, he draws the weakness Overzealous; if an encounter card drawn from this effect would cause him to lose actions, this happens as normal.

»If a player card effect (such as the Gold Pocket Watch) causes the investigator phase to repeat, investigators are considered to gain their actions for their turns at the start of the phase. If a player card effect allows an investigator to take an additional turn, they are considered to gain their actions at the start of that turn.

Haunted

Haunted is an ability that appears on some locations. Each time an investigator fails a skill test while investigating a location, after applying all results for that skill test, that investigator must resolve all "Haunted -" abilities on that location.

A location is "haunted" for the purposes of other card effects if it has at least one "Haunted -" ability (printed or otherwise).

» Shuffle the remainder of the encounter cards to build the encounter deck.

» You are now ready to begin.

When the game is complete:

» If no resolution was reached (each investigator was defeated)...

- ...and it was act 1 when the scenario ended,

  Go to page 74.

- ...and it was act 2 or 3 when the scenario ended,

  Go to page 84.

» If Resolution 1 was reached,

Go to page 74.

» If Resolution 2 was reached,

Go to page 84.

» If Resolution 3 was reached,

Go to page 86.

…from page 73 (Resolution 1 or No Resolution during Act 1).

Try as you might, the Myriad's fortress is virtually impenetrable. As the ritual inside builds towards its terrible conclusion, you throw yourself at it in desperation, seeking any way to break -

Check the Campaign Log:

» If the timeline was weakened,

Go to page 82.

»Otherwise,

- The investigators must replay the scenario.
- Reset the game to this scenario's setup in the following steps.
- No experience points are earned from your previous game.

Continue to Scenario III - A World Turn Down on page 62.

... from page 69 (Ready).

Mount Hollyoke Elementary School - the site of the Myriad's profane ritual, the place that sent you tumbling into the past a year ago - is absent. You've reached its address, the place where you distinctly remember it being, and yet, it is not.

The air thrums with energy, and a green light glows very faintly in your periphery. The ritual's still happening, then. This... This could pose an issue.

Setup

» Gather all the cards from the following encounter sets: A World Torn Down Again, Night of the Ritual, Agents of Aforgomon, Myriad, Nyctophobia, Thugs, and Unleashed Chaos. These sets are indicated by the following icons:

» Check Campaign Log. If the investigators violated causality, also gather the Paradox encounter set, which is indicated by the following icon:

» Check the Campaign Log:

- If the Myriad harnessed the power of another realm: Put Featureless Streets into play. The starting location is Featureless Streets.
- Otherwise, remove Featureless Streets and act 1a from the game. The game begins at act 2a. Put Front Gates, Sports Field, Children's Playground and Side Building into play. If the investigators used the school's front door, put Rear Corridors into play. Otherwise, put Front Hallway into play. The starting location is Sports Field.

» Each investigator who returned to Arkham late performs setup normally, but begins the game at no location. They are not considered to be in play, and cannot interact with the game in any way. At the end of the first round of the game, each of these investigators enters play at the starting location. Each other investigator begins play at the starting location.

Go to page 80.

… Unawares.

Mount Hollyoke Elementary School. It's been a long time since you last visited. You can't say you missed it, honestly.

The barrier erected by the Myriad stands firm around it, and the air is rich with temporal energy. The ritual has begun, which means it's time for you intervene.

Setup

» Gather all the cards from the following encounter sets: A World Torn Down Again, Night of the Ritual, Agents of Aforgomon, Myriad, Nyctophobia, Thugs, and Unleashed Chaos. These sets are indicated by the following icons:

» Check Campaign Log. If the investigators violated causality, also gather the Paradox encounter set, which is indicated by the following icon:

» Check the Campaign Log:

- If the Myriad harnessed the power of another realm: Put Featureless Streets into play. The starting location is Featureless Streets.
- Otherwise, remove Featureless Streets and act 1a from the game. The game begins at act 2a. Put Front Gates, Sports Field, Children's Playground and Side Building into play. If the investigators used the school's front door, put Rear Corridors into play. Otherwise, put Front Hallway into play. The starting location is Sports Field.

» Each investigator who returned to Arkham late performs setup normally, but begins the game at no location. They are not considered to be in play, and cannot interact with the game in any way. At the end of the first round of the game, each of these investigators enters play at the starting location. Each other investigator begins play at the starting location.

Go to page 80.

»Based on your difficulty level, add the following chaos token to the chaos bag for the remainder of the campiagn:

»Easy: -3. »Hard:-6.

»Standard: -5. »Expert: -7.

»If the Myriad raised a powerful warding, put Nexus of Aforgomon into play next to the agenda deck. Otherwise, remove Nexus of Aforgomon from the game.

»If the Myriad took control of a colour out of space, put The Colour's Spread into play next to the agenda deck. Otherwise, remove The Colour's Spread from the game.

»If you have advanced the schemes of the Silver Twilight Lodge, no changes are made. Otherwise, remove each copy of Assistance from the Lodge from the game.

»If you solved the riddle of the sphinx, each investigator begins the game with 1 additional card and 2 additional resources.

»If t*he Myriad solved the riddle of the sphinx*, place 1 doom on the current agenda.

»If [an enemy] disappeared unexpectedly, set a copy of that enemy aside, out of play.

»If the investigators stepped into the future, remove Ritual Circle (A Harnessed Future) from the game.

»If the investigators stepped into the past, remove Ritual Circle (Gateway to the Past) from the game.

»Set each remaining location aside, out of play, along with Estravius Malone, Hound of Unmaking, Unstable Warding, Unstable Energies, The Myriad Gentleman (The High Priest) and each copy of Unleashed Chaos, Stirring Titan and Hired Thugs.

»Shuffle the remainder of the encounter cards to build the encounter deck.

»You are now ready to begin.

The Past and The Present

This scenario has two act decks. The "a/b" deck represents the progress of the present investigators, and behaves as normal, while the "c/d" act deck tracks the actions of the investigators' past selves.

Each "c/d" act has one or more conditions for advancing, at least one of which should be recorded in your Campaign Log with a time next to it. After checking the doom threshold each round, compare these times to the current agenda number and amount of doom on the agenda. Advance the act if:

» The current agenda number is equal to the one recorded, and there is at least as much doom on the current agenda as is recorded, or:

» The current agenda number is greater than the one recorded.

For example: Act Ic advances when the boundary is broken. Agnes Baker has this statement in her Campaign Log, with (1,5) written next to it. After checking the doom threshold each round, she checks this, and when the agenda has 5 or more doom on it, she advances to act 1d. If, due to her Dark Memory weakness, agenda 1 advanced after having only 4 doom on it the previous round, she would still advance act Ic that round, as the agenda number, 2, is greater than the recorded agenda number, 1.

Treading Carefully, Again

With the cult in the middle of their ritual you will have to tread carefully through this scenario. Pay close attention to what page you are told to turn to in this campaign guide, as turning to the wrong page might alert the cult and accelerate their plans

---

When the game is complete:

» If no resolution was reached (each investigator was defeated),

Go to page 82.

» If Resolution 1 was reached,

Go to page 92.

» If Resolution 2 was reached,

Go to page 82.

... Broken.

You run, panting,
down an alley.

The armed men are still in pursuit-

As you explore the manor's garden,
a tall man in a fine suit strolls out to meet you-

Your family, such as it is,
stands at your bedside,
awaiting-

You let out an ear-piercing wail, unsteady on your tiny legs-

-through the barrier.
There must be a way, there-

"Mama."
Your first word.

"I'm sorry.
I failed you all."
Your last.

» In your Campaign Log, record that all times are one.

» Each investigator is driven insane.

» The investigators lose the campaign.

…from page 73 (Resolution 2 or No Resolution during Act 2 or 3).

The distortions around you grow more and more severe. You can barely stand, can hardly move as broken realities circle and shift. Time melts like butter on a stove, and you find yourself falling, falling outside of time...

»In your Campaign Log, record that the investigators fell to the Myriad. Next to this, record the time. If there was no agenda in play, record the time as (3,4).

»If The Myriad Gentleman (The High Priest) is in the victory display, record in your Campaign Log that the investigators eliminated the high priest.

»Remove all and tokens from the chaos bag. Then, add 1 , 1 , and 2 tokens to the chaos bag.

»Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.

Go to page 88.

…from page 73 (Resolution 3).

Tearing apart the first ritual circle, you turn your attention to the other two. The cultists surrounding them advance on you; they don't look like particularly capable fighters, but they outnumber you ten to one. Taking a few cautious steps backwards, you find yourself on the precipice of a swirling, many-hued rift in reality, the untamed schism that was once contained by the arcane circle you broke. It's a way out, maybe, but an unfathomable one...

Then, a commotion on the far side of the auditorium. New arrivals, cutting their way through the cultists, making a beeline for the other circles. It's difficult to see past the encroaching cultists, but you manage to catch the eye of—

No, that can't be.

You glance at the rift behind you. The figure nods, once. You step into the unknown.

»If Ritual Circle (Gateway to the Past) is in play:

- In your Campaign Log, record that the investigators stepped into the past.
- Remove all and tokens from the chaos bag. Then, add 2 and 1 tokens to the chaos bag.

»If Ritual Circle (A Harnessed Future) is in play:

- In your Campaign Log, record that the investigators stepped into the future.
- Remove all and tokens from the chaos bag. Then, add 2 and 1 tokens to the chaos bag.

»If The Myriad Gentleman (The High Priest) is in the victory display, record in your Campaign Log that the investigators eliminated the high priest.

»Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.

Go to page 88.

"With a sense of troublous familiarity, I beheld the blurred

-Clark Ashton Smith, "The Chain of Aforgomon" 89 unstable pictures which flowed past me upon this never-resting medium. Orient temples, flashing with sun-struck bronze and gold; the sharp, crowded of old Rome and Carthage, went by like blown, flying mirages. Each succeeding tableau belonged to a more former existence of my own."
Continue to Scenario IV
Unstuck on page 90.

SCENARIO IV
UNSTUCK

You fall. Though fall is maybe the wrong word - fall implies a sense of down. You tumble through realities, flashes of years long past and dizzying futures muddling your senses. You feel sick, faint, close to passing out.

A sudden stillness. You lie on solid ground. It takes you a minute to pull yourself to your feet, and your head still pounds. You're in a forest. Not one that looks familiar, but it's something. It's reality.

A roar cuts through your musings, painfully loud. Three creatures burst from the foliage, screeching as they flee past you, lizard-like beasts almost as tall as you are. You watch them flee, turning back just in time to spot a colossal beast crushing the trees in front of you. It roars again, the sound pounding your bones to jelly, as it charges you...

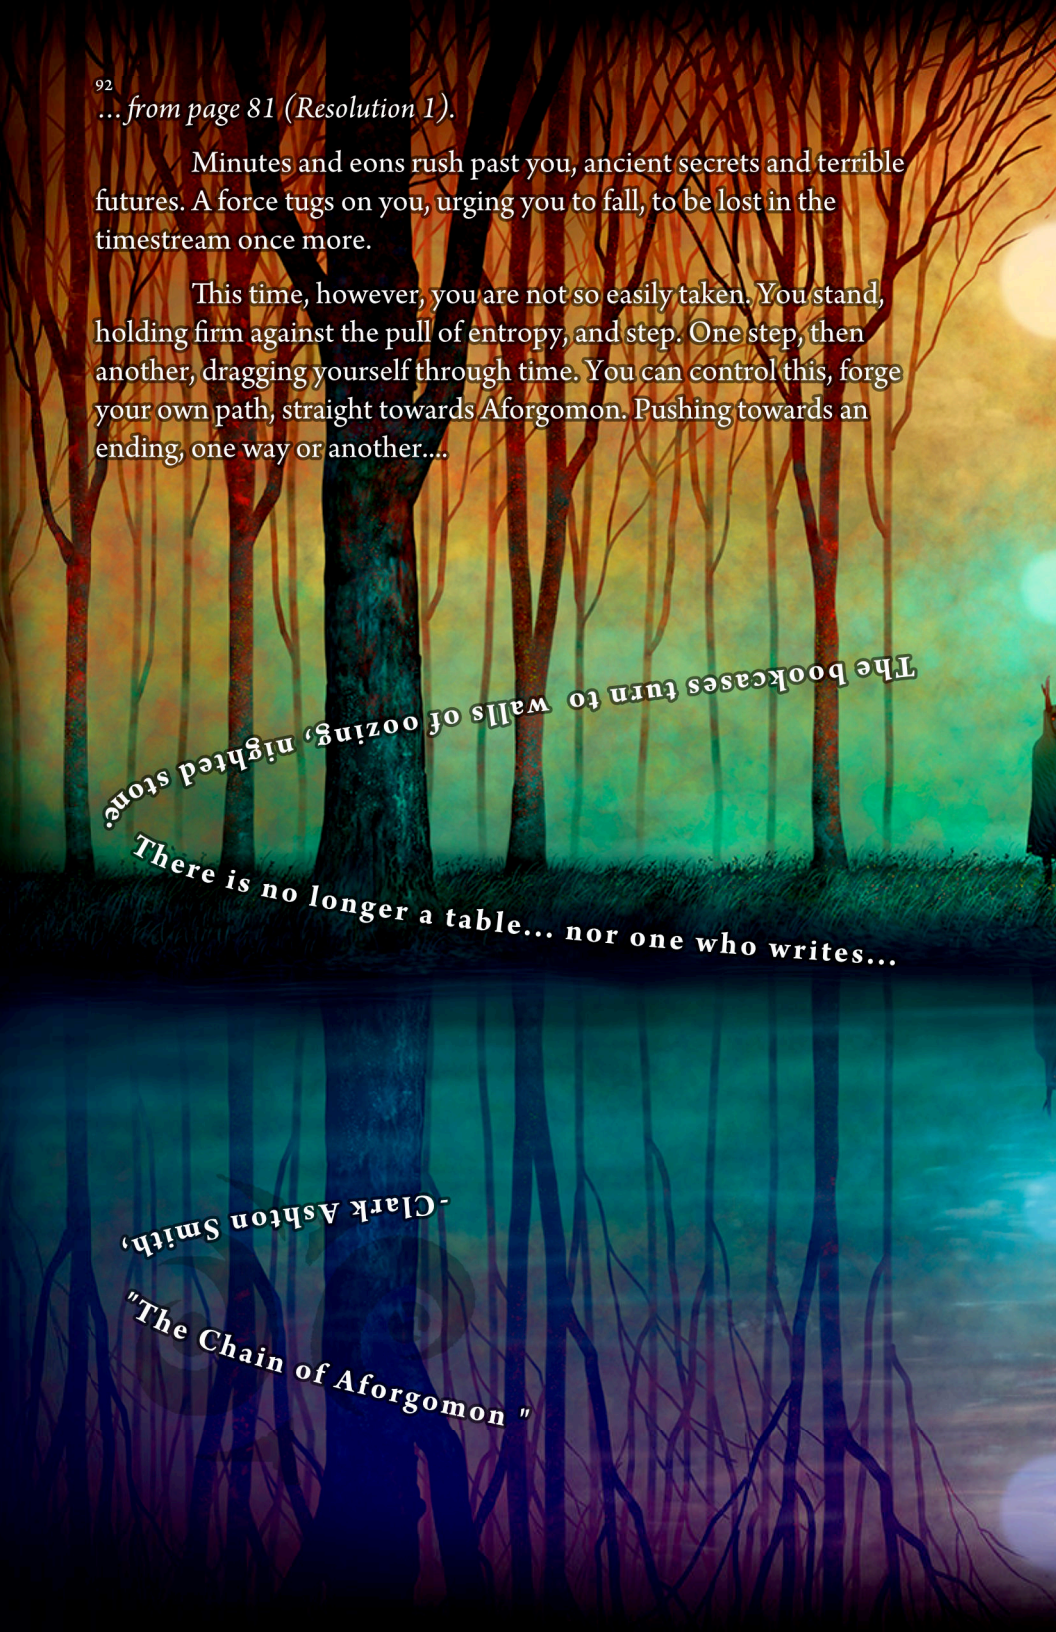
Existence gives way, and you find yourself falling once more.

Proceed to Setup on page 94.

... from page 81 (Resolution 1).

Minutes and eons rush past you, ancient secrets and terrible futures. A force tugs on you, urging you to fall, to be lost in the timestream once more.

This time, however, you are not so easily taken. You stand, holding firm against the pull of entropy, and step. One step, then another, dragging yourself through time. You can control this, forge your own path, straight towards Aforgomon. Pushing towards an ending, one way or another....



»Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.

"Even as I write this at my library table, it seems that an ancient midnight plucks at the lamp. and I breathe the noisome dankness of a dungeon lying unfathomed by any sun, in a lost world."

Continue to the Scenario VII - Time Runs Out on page 98.

Setup

»Gather all cards from the following encounter sets: Unstuck, Paradox, Shifting Reality, and Unravelling Years. These sets are indicated by the following icons:

»Set the Paradox encounter set, The Timestream and Arkham, Massachusetts (Present Day?) locations, and each copy of the Time Runs Backwards weakness aside, out of play.

»Remove one of the two copies of each other location from the game, at random. Then shuffle the eight remaining locations together and put them into play in a random order, forming a circle.

»Shuffle the four Elite enemies together. Set three of them aside, out of play, without looking at them. (The fourth will be shuffled into the encounter deck.)

»Check Campaign Log:

- If the investigators stepped into the past, each investigator begins play at Arkham Massachussetts (16th Century).
- If the investigators stepped into the future, each investigator begins play at A Disquieting Future.
- If the investigators fell to the Myriad, each investigator begins play at a different random Extradimensional location.

»Based on your difficulty level, add the following chaos token to the chaos bag for the remainder of the campiagn:

»Easy: -2. »Hard: -4.

»Standard: -3. »Expert: -5.

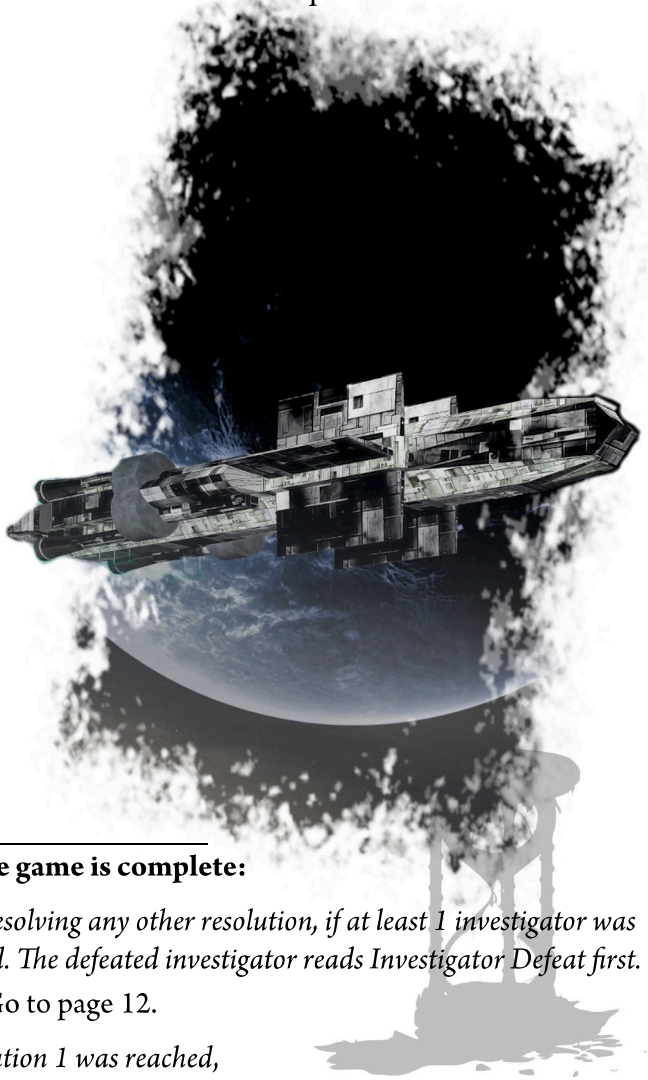
»Shuffle the remainder of the encounter cards to build the encounter deck.

»You are now ready to begin.

Locations Outside of Time

During this scenario, you will sometimes be instructed to choose a random Adrift location. This should be done by shuffling together the 8 locations removed from the game during setup (the versions of each Adrift location in play not currently being used) and drawing 1 at random. If you are instructed to choose a random location that fits a certain criterion, keep drawing locations until one is drawn that satisfies the effect's requirements.



When the game is complete:

»Before resolving any other resolution, if at least 1 investigator was defeated. The defeated investigator reads Investigator Defeat first.

Go to page 12.

»If Resolution 1 was reached,

Go to page 14.

...from page 101 (Resolution 3).

Time spins andwhirls, which is an especially strange experience when you're standing outside it. Keeping a firm grip on the streams you're manipulating, you unwind the works of you and Aforgomon alike, until...

Time lies before you, an endless expanse of realities. Everything that ever was, everything that ever will be, could be, is here, open to you like the pages of a book, reset to how it was before this fight begun. As Aforgomon's unholy presence once again looms above you, you let out a long breath, ready for round two.

»Add 1 token to the chaos bag. If you cannot, each investigator takes 1 mental trauma instead.

»The investigators must replay Scenario VII - Time Runs Out.

- Reset the game to this scenario's Setup.
- Do not record anything else in your Campaign Log except for any trauma suffered from your previous game.
- No experience points are earned from your previous game.
- Players may not alter their decks, even if they are in an illegal state, or remove any weaknesses added during the scenario.
- Any player whose investigator was killed or driven insane is eliminated and may not choose a new investigator to play.

Proceed to Setup on page 10.

TIME RUNS OUT

Time lies before you, an endless expanse of realities. Even in the midst of your current mission, you're forced to take a moment to gawk. Everything that ever was, everything that ever will be, could be, is here, open to you like the pages of a book. The knowledge, the opportunity, the sheer beauty of it all... it's a lot to take in.

Still, the moment passes, and the beauty of the scene is marred somewhat by the formless presence rising above it. Aforgomon, god of the minutes and the cycles; an unfathomable being who seeks nothing less than to unmake everything you see here. Mount Hollyoke's disrupted ritual is the fulcrum through which Aforgomon can reach into your universe.

And between this cosmic force and the universe it seeks to annihilate... you. You suddenly feel very, very small.

Proceed to Setup on page 100.

Setup

» Gather all cards from the following encounter sets: Time Runs Out, Agents of Aforgomon, Paradox, and Unravelling Years. These sets are indicated by the following icons:

» Check Campaign Log. If the investigators unleashed chaos, also gather the Unleashed Chaos encounter set, which is indicated by the following icon:

» Put one of the two versions of the following locations into play at random, revealed side faceup: Fulcrum of Possibility, Days That Never Were, Secrets Long Forgotten, Today, a Thousand Times, What Could Be, What Could Never Be, Dawn of the Universe and The End of All Things. Remove the other versions of each of those locations from the game.

- Each investigator begins play in Fulcrum of Possibility.

» Set The Past, The Present, The Future, and Yourself aside, out of play.

» Shuffle the remainder of the encounter cards to build the encounter deck.

» You are now ready to begin.

Locations Outside of Time

Many of the locations in this scenario have no unrevealed side, and therefore enter play with their revealed side faceup. For the best experience, do not look at the reverse of these cards unless an effect instructs you to do so.

During this scenario, you will sometimes be instructed to choose a random location. This should be done by shuffling together the 8 locations removed from the game during setup (the versions of each location in play not currently being used) and drawing 1 at random. If you are instructed to choose a random location that fits a certain criterion, keep drawing locations until one is drawn that satisfies the effect's requirements.

Exile

When a card is exiled, it is removed from the game and returned to your collection. During campaign play, a card that has been exiled must be purchased again with experience points (between scenarios) if you wish to re-include it in your deck. If a game effect forces you to choose a target to exile, weaknesses and permanent assets are not valid targets.

When the game is complete:

» If no resolution was reached (each investigator was defeated),
Go to page 102.

»If Resolution 1 was reached,
Go to page 102.

»If Resolution 2 was reached,
Go to page 104.

»If Resolution 3 was reached,
Go to page 96.

…from page 101 (Resolution 1 or No Resolution).

The end of time is an experience unlike any other. Everything will be still; any sense of movement or causality was gone. Everything that was or could be or never was will be happening now, inasmuch as 'now' would have any meaning here.

All times are one. Everything will be now. And here is were you were stuck, where you would have been made part of an unchanging tapestry of reality, where you could be, would be, were, are, will be trapped forever. That is, if forever still existed.

»In your Campaign Log, record that all times are one.

»Each investigator is driven insane.

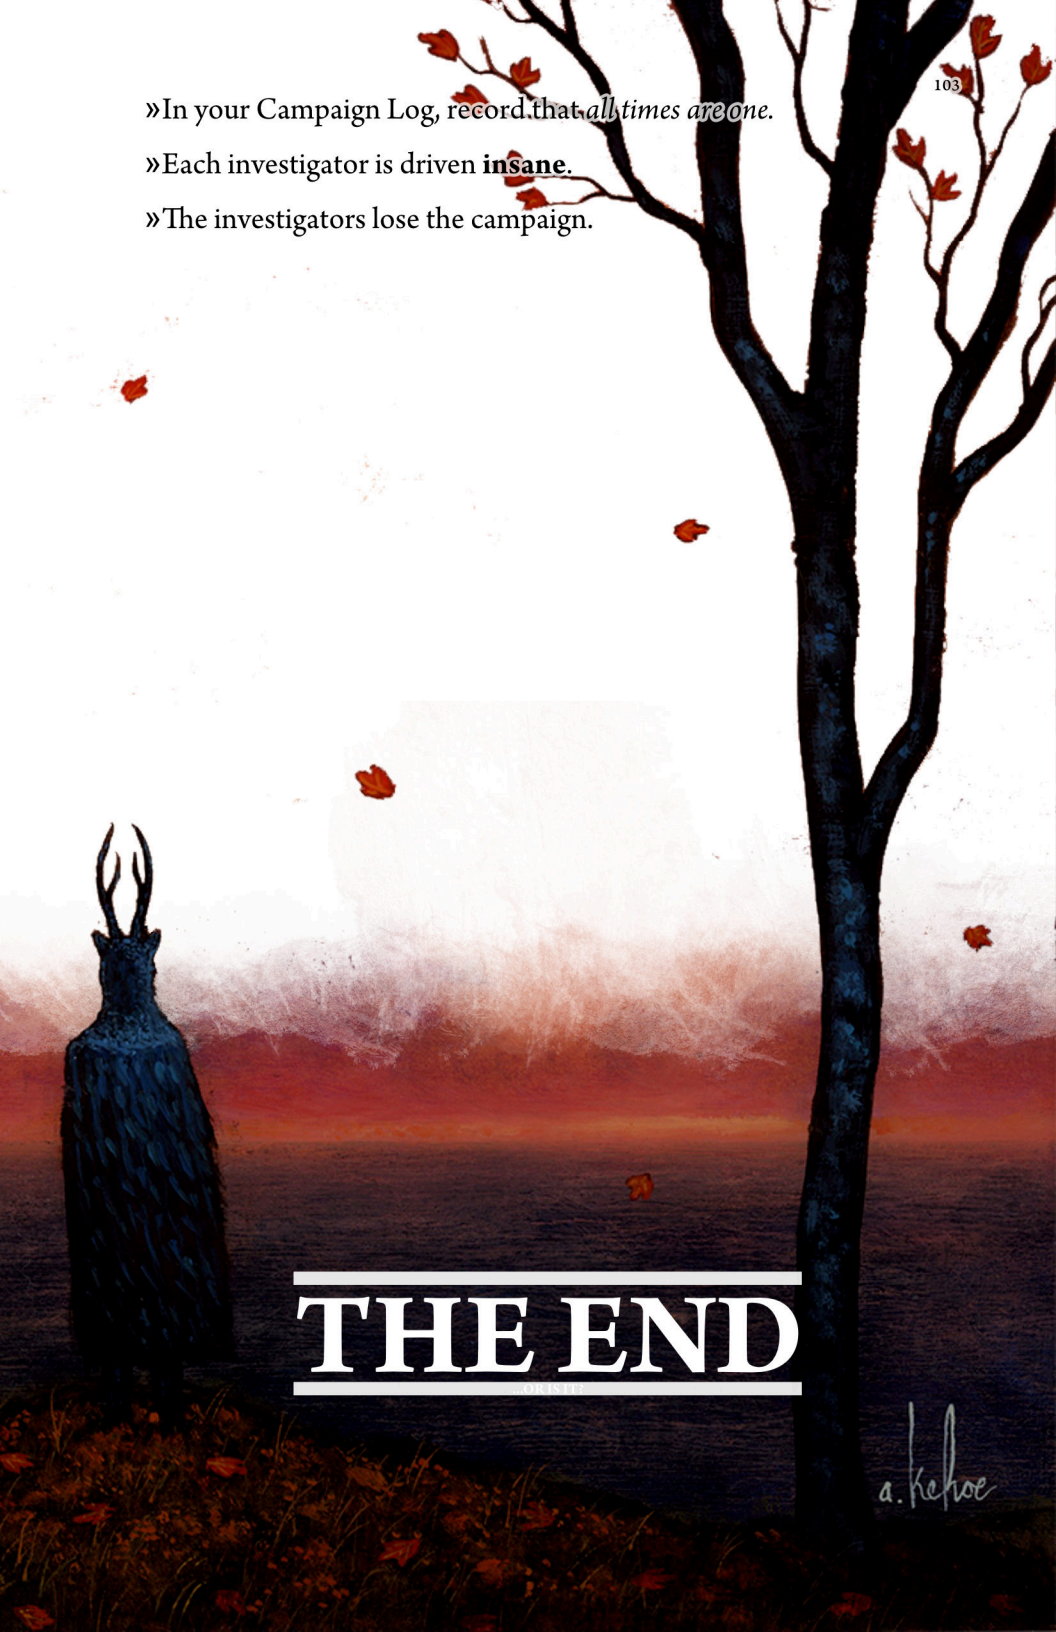
»The investigators lose the campaign.



…from page 101 (Resolution 2).

You find yourself, eventually, lying on a smooth, flat surface. Every inch of your body wants to sink into the floor, become one with the ground. You stay that way for a long, long time.

It's the smell of smoke that finally makes you pull yourself up. You're in the gymnasium of Mount Hollyoke Elementary School. The cultists and gangsters seem to be long gone, leaving behind only dormant runes and abandoned texts. The smoke drifts in from the rear door, so you exit out the front.

Day broke at some point, perhaps more than once. But you made it through, reality made it through, and perhaps, now, you can return to some semblance of normality. You've not lived that life for a year, sure, but you're the only you in the present now. You'll need to find somewhere new to live...

Lost in your thoughts, you watch as a conflagration consumes the school, presumably set by the backfiring ritual.

This whole thing started with a fire; it seems only fitting that it should end the same way.

»In your Campaign Log, record that the investigators bound Aforgomon in a prison of time.

»For each investigator who ended the game with at least 1 copy of the Unspeakable Oath weakness in their hand, record in your Campaign Log that [investigator name] still bears Aforgomon 's mark.

»In your Campaign Log, for each investigator whose 'existance is waning' record that [investigator name]'s existence is waning.

»The investigators win the campaign!

Proceed to Epilogue on page 114.

DESIGN NOTES

Doctor Who was a big part of my childhood. For a lot of reasons, most of which are irrelevant to this campaign, but the storyteller in me greatly appreciated the plot elements time travel allowed. The episode Blink is a great example of this (and a stellar watch, even if you know nothing about the show) - cause and effect does a merry little jig back and forth through time. Coming to design an Arkham Horror campaign in 2019, I settled on that as the core story I wanted to tell. It goes without saying that such a story is a lot more difficult to tell in an interactive medium than on a television show, but I hope I managed to convey the same feel.

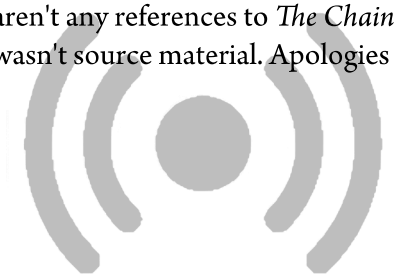
Once I was playing with time travel, Unstuck was basically inevitable - I didn't want to fully dump the investigators in another time period, but I like cake and I love eating it, so I devoted a scenario to messing around with different time periods. I love more open-ended scenarios like Threads of Fate, so A Year to Plan happened. The Myriad Gentleman came to me in a dream, and actually predated the Swarming mechanic - he used to search for another copy of himself when he was drawn, and then The Dream-Eaters was released and I stole that mechanic so damn quick. And then his scenario doesn't even use it. Hey ho. I ended up on seven scenarios simply because I didn't have any ideas for an eighth that weren't blatant filler Aforgomon was actually quite a late addition - there was always an ancient one looking to destroy time, but it was a long time before I actually did some research into appropriate Great Old Ones, and found Aforgomon. This is why for the most part there aren't any references to The Chain of Aforgomon - for the most part, it wasn't source material. Apologies to Clark Ashton Smith fans.



I had a blast designing this campaign, and I hope you enjoyed playing it. I imagine there are a ton of revisions still to come on this campaign, but in the meantime my mind drifts inexorably towards the next new idea. So now I've designed a fairly 'classic' Arkham campaign, I'm off to make something sprawling and break every rule I can think of. Given how long this one took me, expect something exciting in the early 2030s!

- Oliva Juliet

CREDITS

»Campaign Design: Oliva Juliet

»Arkham Horror: The Card Game* Design: MJ Newman and Nate French.

»Featured Artist: Andy Kehoe

»Cover Art: Wenzel Hablik

»Special thanks to...

- ArgentNightmares, for endless testing and endless patience.
- jaqenZann, without whose incredible Strange Eons plugin none of this could exist.
- The SCED developers, for the obvious.
- Axolotl, for letting me borrow his spaceship.
- Maxine Newman, Nate French and everyone involved in Arkham Horror: the Card Game's development, for giving us an incredible game, and an incredible framework for telling stories.

»Playtesters: AyyGavin, The Beard, TheBudiez, Gold, HarrisonF, Iados_Kairon, ItsEveNow, PuertoMateo, Sergey, Silvio P, tomcool, Toradin.

EPILOGUE

Check Campaign Log. In order, read each of the following entries only if the investigators won the campaign and the related campaign log entry is true.

»If at least one investigator's existence is waning, that investigator,
Go to page 116.

»If at least one surviving investigator still bears Aforgomon's mark,
Go to page 118.

»If you have advanced the schemes of the Silver Twilight Lodge,
Go to page 120.

After all true entries have been explored,
Go to page 122.

...from page 115 (Float on).

You're tired. This isn't exactly surprising; you just fought a god. As you wend your way through the early-morning Arkham streets, though, you feel surprisingly light on your feet - if fatigue weighs you down, this feeling lifts you up, until you're practically floating. You feel yourself drift off, still walking, into a cozy, endless sleep...

» Each investigator whose existence is waning is erased from reality.

» Remove that investigator's entry from your Campaign Log as thoroughly as possible, as that investigator never existed.

Return to page 115.

...from page 115 (Bound)

In the years that follow, you remain fascinated with time. After all, you understand spacetime perhaps better than anyone else alive. You try to share your findings a few times; each time, your theories are shot down as outlandish and unfounded. There's so much you could teach the world- you could advance the field of physics by decades with what you know -but nobody wants to listen.

Four years after your final confrontation with Aforgomon, you knock three times on the front door of an elegant manor on the outskirts of Arkham. A silent butler leads you to a bedchamber, where thick velvet curtains block out all light and the smell of death hangs heavy in the air. The rooms occupant stirs slightly.

"I'm so, so glad that you accepted my invitation." The voice is barely more than a whisper. The withered form of Joseph Baxter, the Myriad Gentleman, looks at least a hundred years old. He smiles at you, the predatory smile looking rather out of place on the old man's face. "We have much work to do."

Return to page 115.

...from page 115 (Beholden).

"And we're quite certain it's real?" Carl Sanford's eyes rest on the slight man sat nervously before him. Mr. Sanford was an intimidating man at the best of times, but the intensity he was focusing on the messenger made the man want to shrink into nothingness.

"Y-yes sir," he managed, "Our trials were conclusive. We now only miss one component-"

"Not quite. Our new friends helped us with that as well." Eyes twinkling, Sanford produces a loose array of singed papers from his desk. "After helping dispatch Baxter's operation, one of our agents recovered some of his research. We have everything we need.

"Let the great work begin."

Return to page 115.

... from page 115 (Time's arrow).

"Sometimes I almost doubt that he ever existed. It is as if the man, and all that pertains to him, were being erased from human record by some mysterious acceleration of the common process of obliteration."

- Clark Ashton Smith, "The Chain of Aforgomon"

THE END